I attach a draft outline statement on monetary policy. I am afraid it is not yet in anything like a satisfactory state, and I will continue to work on it this afternoon and this evening. If, in the meantime, you have guidance to offer at this stage, I shall be at home (693-1500) from 3.00 pm onwards. The aim must be to send the text across before lunch tomorrow for Douglas Wass's meeting in the afternoon, and I will put round a further draft as early as possible in the morning. I also enclose Middleton's version of a statement which will also be for discussion at Wass's meeting.
