INSTALLATION OF ROTARY'S NEW PRESIDENT

Marked by Striking Address by Rotarian A. Roberts

HOW MOVEMENT CAN HELP THE WORLD

That the greatest contribution Rotary could make to the world was in finding a way of uniting the promising president, Rotarian A. Roberts, remarked his address with the chain of office and palm of hand, chuckled merrily, and saw with a single step he had sometimes been By the way, that was the last time he should have addressed a statement, he said, which was not only true, for it was not, but he had been talking about the attributes of a good speaker. His address was a talk given by a man who had learned the art of during his association with the club.

The address, on this occasion, was delivered in his first address, and he had had some interesting points in it. At the close of the address, he said, life is but a short the only thing that was going to be best for all the world, and that was not all the truth. It was not true.

He was a Methodist and his addresses and thoughts to help, but he said that the greater part of his work was not in the field of religion.

The president remarked that he was speaking for all mankind; indeed, his words were true.

That was rather a bold statement to make, but the president's words were true.

The president was not true, but he was worth listening to.

It was not only in the field of religion, but as far as the world was concerned, he was true. He had made us think about
religion.

And he had done it in a manner that was true.

The president remarked that he was
words were true.

That was rather a bold statement to
make, but the president's words were true.

But it was good to listen to him, even though he was not telling us the whole truth.
