Dear Prime Minister,

How very kind of ^{me}
you to think of sending me a photograph, with a most flattering inscription too. I am most grateful to have such a reminder of my New York days, particularly the vivid and exciting last three months. Thank you very much indeed.

Even retired old buffers read the newspapers and I have been glad to see no sign of anyone trying to stir up the → Security Council over The Falklands. I gather that the Mexicans are planning to make nuisances of themselves at the General Assembly. I hope that we can mobilise the Commonwealth to reduce support for whatever resolution the Latins put forward. If we could cut their vote down to sixty or seventy, they might think twice and I believe that we have more hope of persuading the Commonwealth than our European partners. Anyway, not my business really!

I do hope you have had a decent holiday. No one could have deserved one more. You showed us all the way during one of the sternest crises in our recent history. It was something to remember and I for one will never forget.

With warmest good wishes and again, many, many thanks. Yours ever Tony (Parsons)
